Why don't we organize a TD.WIN CROSS COUNTRY CARAVAN for those of us driving to the January 6th protest?

posted 6 hours ago by BoatingAccident +2619 / -0

I'd even step out of the shadows to help do it. I have vacation time to use.

My wife isn't thrilled about me leaving the family to go by myself either (well she won't be thrilled as soon as I tell her) so a caravan would be great.

Thanks!

Did 96% of DC really vote for Biden or is there fraud too. While I'm sure it didn't go to Trump, 96%?? Come on man!

Probably fraud but after years living in the DC metro that number sounds right. There are so many fucking retards there.

Maybe not 96 but definitely at least 90. Remember that everyone in DC depends on big government and will vote in their best interests in that regard

Cool. What is the parking situation for things like this in DC? If I manage to find a hotel do they usually have parking available or do I have to Uber or taxi in? If I have to sleep in car do you know how far out I'd have to drive to be allowed to park on a street or something overnight? thx

DC is not good for parking near the mall on a normal day. The DC mayor will work against us by shutting down public transportation in the name of "safety". In prior rallies Airbnb has cancelled reservations of people it deemed racist, supremacist etc. (ie. Trump supporters)

So my first suggestion try to find something across the river near Pentagon/Crystal City in Virginia. Be prepared to walk if necessary, but from there it is a doable walk.

Second if you try to get a hotel near the wharf or anywhere near the mall and you book in on the 4th and 5th you will get in and get parking but hold onto your wallet. On just the 5th you are unlikely to be able to reach the hotel by car after noon.

Third, book in Virginia as close to DC as possible, you can likely find transportation to the Pentagon/Crystal City area and walk from there. The Maryland side is only good if along a metro line and you run the risk of them being shut down.

Fourth, stay somewhere further south like Richmond or Charlottesville and commute in late on the night of the 5th. Get as close as you can and again be prepared to walk.

Fifth pray for decent weather!

and Sixth, my land in Virginia is open for anyone who pms me and has a camper or tent. I am 2 hours from DC on a normal day so it probably means arriving on the 4th or 5th and heading to DC in the wee hours of the 6th.

Public trans is reasonably good in DC. If you are coming from outside I'd just pull up the metro map, stop and park near a stop, and ride that in. It's cheap and far easier than trying to navigate the city otherwise.

Don't forget National Harbor, there are few hotels and you can take the bus to the Metro, then Metro right into downtown (L'Enfant Plaza or Metro Center station)

No need to go all the way down to Richmond. Plenty of places in Loudoun County people can stay, around Dulles or even further west. Camp grounds and RV lots as well.

Going to depend but I wouldn't hitch your wagon on parking in D.C....Either expect to park in VA or MD and take the metro for your last part. If you have a camper nobody is going to say shit if you park at a walmart and there are also a good number of KOA sites near DC.

EDIT: Guess the KOAs are closed? There are some national parks with the ability to camp but some of them you will be lucky to get to with a 4x4 truck and you would basically need stay in a tent.

itll be too cold to sleep in a car. BUT - they have lyft or lime electric scooters all over the city. I saw many people riding them around. You download the app, hook it up to payment and wave the app in front of the bike to turn it on i think. I walked sooo much when we went dec 12th. I'd look into signing up for scooters if i had to do it agian

I went down for the dec 12th rally. We were able to park on the street a 20 min walk from the whitehouse. Roads were blocked off for about 30 square blocks - it'll likely be wider this time. There are parking garages, it was 28 or 30/day i believe next to our hotel. Heads up though, it was a ghost town. Most shops/restraunts were takeout only, bars were mostly closed. I went with a recovered alcoholic though, so the group didn't want to find one anyways. Many drank in the streets. I had some whiskey in a diet coke bottle i was hitting. I wouldn't explore the city alone, that's when antifa/blm target anyone with maga gear on. Pussies.

We could roll up behind improvised armor to protect our boots against Antifa. If it weren't for the fact that there's probably gonna be a TFR we might even be able to get some helicopter pilot pedes to film it all from above, watch for communists, ~~and perhaps give some of those communists free rides into the Potomac.~~

Texarkana

Edit: since everyone would be going east anyway. It would prevent east Texans from having to drive west just to turn around and go back east. Plus, there's beer in Texarkana.

This is a great idea because guns are essentially outlawed in DC, so if everyone is open carrying weapons then you need to cross the border together so the fucking asshole bitch police will not have the gaul to harass you.

I'm reaching out to Stop the Steal groups to organize local protests. There are people who cannot make it - but who are more than willing to take to the streets in their own city.

Local protests should only be for those who absolutely can't make it, as otherwise we're dividing our forces.

This is actually more of a safety idea, than a show of support. Law enforcement can arrest and detain one or two people on made up charges, if they suspect they are going to Washington, but they wouldn't DARE arrest (or try to arrest) 60 or more armed patriots. If one person gets pulled over, ALL of us should pull over. One or two people get approached by LEO, then 100 of us need to stand armed behind them. We need to severely outnumber law enforcement in every situation. If they bring in 500 riot police to clear a square, we counter with 5000 of us, weapons drawn. If they shoot (even a single shot) we empty our mags in that direction.....all hypothetically, of course.

There is a good interstate that crosses the country and gets you near DC. Everyone could drive north/south towards the heartland and have a caravan. Going to need a lot of hotel rooms if pedes are going to come from the west coast though.
